SPLENDID WORK OF FIRE FIGHTERS

Daly City rsidents in the vicinity of Knowles avenue were aroused at 2:30 A. M. Wednesday morning by the sound of sirens and bells ringing, and on awakening they found the roof of a house at 41 Knowles avenue, occupied by Ray Foley, on fire. The houses on either side, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Hill and family and Mr. Duffy and family, were in great danger of being destroyed by the flames.

The alarm was sent in and the members of the Daly City Volunteer Fire Department were quickly on the scene, working frantically to prevent the flames from spreading to the surrounding property.

A large crowd soon gathered to witness the blaze, which was quickly brought under control by the fire department and it was only through their splendid work and quick action that a far greater loss was not sustained.

The houses were all occupied at the time of the fire, but fortunately the occupants all escaped without injury. Mr. Duffy, who has been sick for some time, was carried out by the firemen and quickly removed to South San Francisco hospital, suffering from shock.

This has been one of the most threatening fires in Daly City for many years and the residents of the community may well be proud of their fire department, for it was only through their splendid and heroic work that a great loss has been averted.

QUIET MEETING OF THE CITY COUNCIL

Ordinary routine business occupied the attention of the City Council at their regular meeting last Monday evening.

Mayor Smith, who has been away for about three weeks on a business trip to Long Beach, was not expected to be present, but surprised all by arriving by plane just in time for the meeting.

A communication was received from the Veterans of Foreign Wars inviting the City Council to be present at the celebration of Americanization day on Friday evening, April 28.

By action of the council any rental to be received by the fire houses for elections purposes other than Daly City elections is to be turned over to the Fire Department.

The regular monthly bills were ordered paid.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL NEWS OF INTEREST

The Public Schools Week program held at the auditorium of Jefferson High on Tuesday evening was enjoyed by a large number of parents, teachers and friends.

The chairman of the evening was Mr. A. L. Stockton and the speaker, Miss Pansy J. Abbott.

Miss Abbott, County Superintendent of Schools, spoke to the parents of the importance of the schools and the necessity of keeping the high standard already attained, also the necessity of a clear understanding of the desires, efforts and accomplishments of their school system. She told them how important we considered the three R's, but that the three C's were equally important and that in our work the three C's (courtesy, co-operation and citizenship) are constantly intermingled with the three R's.

The musical numbers were enjoyed and appreciated by all present. The Glee clubs from the Grammar schools and the High school, also the High school band, shows in some measure the work being done.

The "hot dog" sales held at Woodrow Wilson and Vista Grande schools on Tuesday by the P. T. A. were well patronized and the ladies netted a neat sum.

The exhibit in the halls of the Woodrow Wilson school is worthy of mention, the work shown being that of all the grades from the Low 5th to the High 8th, including also the Kindergarten.

Many parents have taken the opportunity to acquaint themselves with the work being done and to meet the teachers with whom their children are so closely associated.

Parents and teachers realize also that the child is our greatest wealth and that the race moves forward through our children. It is therefore necessary that school and home keep in close touch, and it is with this thought in mind that National Education week is set aside by the government

LEGION PLANS AID FOR UNEMPLOYED

Members of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, held the first meeting under the new schedule, when the executive board met in Legion Hall, Wednesday, April 19. The executive board and several members of the Post were present. Comrade Callsen was appointed on the executive board, and Comrade Allen was appointed service officer, to fill the unexpired term of Comrade Chapman, who held both offices.

Daly City Post No. 410 wishes to thank Comrade Chapman, who resigned because the duties of his position did not allow him the time which he felt he should have to work for the best interests of the Legion, for the efficient manner in which he conducted both offices.

Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, held their first social activity in the new club rooms, a whist party, on Friday, April 21.

Several members of Daly City Post No. 410 attended the San Mateo County Council dance at Belmont, on Saturday, April 22, with Comrade Cornell, who was publicity chairman, and assisted as one of the floor managers of the dance.

The color guards presented the Post's national standard at the exercises held in the Jefferson Union high school, Tuesday evening, April 25, in observance of National Education week.

The regular monthly dance of the Post will be held in Eagles' Hall tomorrow night, Saturday, April 29, with music by a popular jazz orchestra. "Doc" and the other members of the "hay-wire" orchestra will be out of town that night.

The American Legion benefit dance, sponsored by Daly City Post No. 410, will be held in the Daly City Auditorium, next Saturday night, May 6. Music will be furnished by Dorothy O'Brien and her Play-girls. This orchestra plays very good dance music and provides varied entertainment. The entire net proceeds of this dance will be turned over to the Daly City Welfare Board for unemployment relief.

There will be a meeting of the executive board held in the Legion Hall, Wednesday, May 3. All Post members are invited to attend the board meeting. An initiation of new members will be held in Legion Hall on Wednesday, May 10. The work will be put on by the degree team of San Mateo Voiture No. 393, La Societe des 40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux.

Patriotically accepting the reductions in Veterans' benefits as a sacrifice necessary in a national emergency, the American Legion is determined that henceforth no tax money shall be misused or spent on something less worthy than their own claims.

Every time a Legionnaire sees a dollar being wasted in government, he is urged by National Commander Johnson to do something about it. The Legion is asked to be on its guard to bring to light any example of waste or graft that they may come to know of, and to insist that every dollar spent on federal, state or municipal projects goes further, and does more, than any dollar ever did, in government expenditure. Tax Collector McSweeney Reports Collections Good

County tax collections for what would ordinarily be the last day before delinquencies are added were reported to be very good by Tax Collector Ambrose McSweeney, last Saturday. McSweeney said the collections amounted to only $5,000 less than the same day last year.

This year the date when payments on the second installment of county taxes are due has been extended from April 20 to June 20, by state legislation. Last year, on April 20, Mr. McSweeney says $140,000 was collected. This year on the same day $135,000 was collected, McSweeney said.

City Manager Would Drop Suit for Damage

City Manager E. P. Wilsey, San Mateo, has asked the Redwood City superior court to dismiss his $100,000 slander suit against R. P. Schwerin, San Mateo, member of the Tax Reduction League. In his original petition Wilsey charged Schwerin slandered his character at a city budget hearing last year.

In his request for dismissal, Wilsey said Schwerin had made sufficient apology, and that the last city election had vindicated the administration.

RACING MEASURE AID TO BREEDERS

A. K. Macomber, owner of Mira Monte Stock Farm, near San Jose, is thinking of returning to California racing. At present his breeding and racing operations are confined to England and France. Consummation of the plans for having the well known red and white silks on California courses once more is contingent on the disposition of the pari mutuel racing bill now on the desk of Governor James Rolph, Jr., at Sacramento.

As a demonstration of the deep interest of the Macomber interests in the sport in this state, a petition signed by agriculturists and orchardists of the central portion of Santa Clara county requesting Governor Rolph to approve the racing measure was to be forwarded to the executive mansion early this week.

Harry Couse, superintendent of Mira Monte, signed the petition of the breeders of the state to the Governor while at Tanforan the other day, and immediately got busy on the paper prepared for circulation in his home territory. Mira Monte is on the outskirts of San Jose and long has been noted as a nursery for thoroughbred horses. Pending the outcome of the battle for the legalization of mutuels in California, the stallion Phulsa and other blood stock was moved from Mira Monte to Haras du Quesnay in France some time ago.

Couse stated he has been corresponding with his principal and that Macomber, a Californian himself, is anxious to make an arrangement for racing in his own state. Some years ago, following a successful campaign in his own name on Eastern tracks, Macomber turned over both breeding and racing material to his late brother, Dr. H. J. Macomber, and the Macomber colors were extremely popular out this way. One season Macomber was the leading owner of the United States.

The inspiration to enter the racing game came to A. K. Macomber and Mrs. Macomber at the running horse meeting held on the Presidio reservation, San Francisco, in 1915, during the international exposition. Friends were having keen enjoyment in witnessing thier horses compete out on the mile oval and the Macombers commissioned the late Walter Jennings to go to England to purchase a string. Such noted gallopers as Hand Grenade, War Cloud, Sunbonnet, Star Hawk, War Cry, Hollister and others were brought back to this country as a nucleus for the Macomber establishment.

Encouraged by his success in this country, the California sportsman acquired the Haras du Quesnay from the late W. K. Vanderbilt, and for a long period has been one of the leading breeders of the world. Victories in famous stakes have come to him both in France and England. A notable achievement was the winning in one season of both the Cambridgeshire and Cesarewitch at New-

EAGLES DEFEATED IN CRUCIAL GAME

Following an uphill fight, the Daly City Eagles' baseball team was eliminated in the race for first place honors in the second half of the San Francisco Recreation League race, last Sunday on the Father Crowley grounds.

Off to a bad start as the result of three infield errors in the first inning, which spotted the Mahers three runs, none of which were earned off Pitcher Pierotti, the Eagle boys did not get going until the score stood 8 to 2 in favor of the Don P. Mahers. Going into the fifth inning the boys started a hitting attack that continued on through the sixth and seventh innings, with a total of five runs on eight hits, bringing the score up to 10 to 7. The Paint boys had made two runs in the first of the seventh, as the result of a dropped fly ball and one infield error. These were the only two runs scored off Tenorio, who stopped the Paint boys after he relieved Babe Pierotti in the third inning. It was a tough blow to have the game called at the end of the seventh inning, the way the boys were going.

The work of Mallock and Leo Burns stood out for the Paint boys, while Smith, with three hits, and Rettig, with two hits, featured the Eagles' attack. Maloney got a big hand when he took advantage of Pitcher Martin's windup and stole home.

Next Sunday, at 2 P. M., on the same grounds, the Eagles will play the Fillmore Merchants in the contest for second place.

PROBE AIRPLANE CRASH

An army board of inquiry has directed an investigation into the death of a Crissy Field pilot and his attractive girl companion who were killed in a plane crash at the Santa Rosa airport last Sunday. Lieutenant Stephen A. Beck, 27, and Miss Marjorie Patricia Hughes, 20, of San Francisco, were killed instantly when Beck's observation ship struck a cluster of high tension wires while attempting a landing.

GREATER SUPPLY OF GOLD URGENT

By J. W. MARCHBANK.

While statesmen from Europe, summoned to Washington by President Roosevelt, are getting straightened away, it is the height of wisdom to emphasize the need of greater production of gold, a topic we have been discussing for some weeks. Things are upside down, as everyone admits, and the only way to get them righted is through the universal resumption of the gold standard, which can only come about through immense increase in the output of gold.

In the San Francisco Call-Bulletin, the liberal editor, Fremont Older, pertinently says on the proposition of the Federal Government grubstaking gold miners:

"The Government grubstakes the railroads. It has grubstaked our merchant marine, quite properly. It has, through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, grubstaked thousands of corporations. It MIGHT grubstake a few men who are willing to do hard work."

It has been estimated that twenty cents a day will provide the necessary food for men who are grubstaked. It is the opinion of many minds, our own included, that a stream of gold into the mints of the nation would restore prosperity overnight.

The problem of method to be adopted in the provision of food and supplies for the hardy men and youth to go into the gulches and valleys of Alaska and the Pacific Northwest is a pressing one. We are opposed to indiscriminate distribution of the equipment without any showing on the part of the miners. The best procedure is for advances of a preliminary nature to be made by trading posts, established at strategic points, and when sufficient dust has been found to repay the loan or for the price of equipment, payment should be made. The trading posts would be operated by Uncle Sam. Independence and self reliance are qualities that must be developed in the thousands of men going to the placer fields.

Ramsay MacDonald, a true hearted Scotchman, is talking in a particularly able manner since arriving at Washington, and we believe both MacDonald and President Roosevelt can be depended upon to have the welfare of the people at heart at all times. As the Prime Minister said not long ago, war against unmerited poverty must be pushed to the limit. Sending men out to the mines is a measure that will help materially in ridding ourselves of the bogey of unemployment and bring the world back to a sound economic basis.

Federal Tax on Beer to Be Paid Before April 30

Beer dealers are advised that they have until April 30 to pay federal taxes for the final quarter of the fiscal year ending June 30, now due.

The federal tax for retailers is $20 per year, and for wholesalers $50. The final quarter payments are $5 for the retailers and $12.50 for the wholesalers. A penalty of 25 per cent will be added if payment is not made before April 30, 1933.

Forms may be secured from A. B. McSweeney, Deputy Collector of United States Revenue, at Room 6, City Hall, San Mateo, Cal.

AWARDED RIBBONS FOR MAKING BEST POSTERS

The posters submitted by Patsy Cacran and Doretta Wilson received a prize ribbon in the poster contest in the Seventeenth District, P. T. A. The judges were Mrs. G. W. Beeman, art instructor in the Burlingame high school, Mrs. George Davis, of Millbrae, and George Roussel.

The officers and members of the Crocker Parent-Teachers' Association are very proud of the fact that these two children received recognition for their work in art. The posters were kept by the district art chairman, Miss V. Roussel, to be sent on to the state convention to be held in Long Beach next month.

Congratulations are being showered on Miss G. Neilson, the art teacher of Jefferson school district. Finally the northern end of San Mateo has broken the artistic ice.

Peterson Tideland Bill Sent to Governor Rolph

The Senate by unanimous vote last Tuesday passed the bill of Assemblyman Frederick Peterson of Burlingame, which grants all state tidelands and submerged lands within the city of San Mateo to that municipality to be used in harbor development. The bill now goes to Governor Rolph for his signature.

OLD GLORY POST WILL ENTERTAIN

Tonight is the night. The public is cordially invited to attend the open meeting of Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, in the Masonic Hall. Elaborate plans have been made to make this meeting an outstanding one. "Americanization day" is the theme of the day. Prominent speakers will be present and address the meeting. Dancing will follow the meeting. The meeting is open, and everyone is invited to be present.

A new plan of procedure has been outlined for the operation of the Post in our city, more and larger committees have been appointed to handle many phases of the work that in the past has been overlooked and neglected. It is hoped that the plan outlined will be productive of results.

Commander Johnston, supported by his two junior officers, J. W. Allen, Senior Vice-Commander, and R. F. Brulez, Junior Vice-Commander, have worked hard to outline this plan, with the assistance of the other officers and members.

Plans are being laid now for a mammoth dance to be held in July, in which all the Posts in San Mateo county will be interested. This affair will be the largest even undertaken in this territory, and one that will attract hundreds to our district for the evening. Further particulars will be given as they are known to your correspondent.

District Commander Craig has called for a district meeting to be held in Redwood City, May 6, in which all the Posts in the district will participate. Parade, monster meeting, and many items to be taken up at this meeting which will be discussed at the Department Convention in Las Vegas, Nevada, in June.

Our Auxiliary has voted to form a degree team. We know that it will be the best, as only the best goes in that Auxiliary.

The Auxiliary held their regular monthly whist on Tuesday night, April 25, which was well attended. Don't forget that they hold these whists the last Tuesday of each month, in the Eagles' Hall, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

A picnic will be held in June by the Post and Auxiliary, at a location to be designated later. We are going to hold a number of these affairs when the weather permits.

Old Glory Post meets every second and Fourth Friday of each month, and members and visiting members are always welcome to attend these meetings.

FRED R. LINSER, Adjutant.

Veterans Plan to Organize Post at Half Moon Bay

Invitations to attend an organization and get-together meeting of World war veterans for the purpose of inaugurating an American Legion Post at Half Moon Bay have been sent out by H. L. Knowles, District Commander of the Eighth District of California, it is announced. The meeting will be held Saturday evening, May 6, in Judge J. M. Bettencourt's chambers at Half Moon Bay.

While a number of members of the American Legion live in this district, they are members of San Mateo Post No. 82, or of other Posts in Santa Cruz county, and feel the lack of a unit of the organization in the neighborhood of their homes. They feel that their home community should support and in turn should be benefited by a Post of the American Legion, a peace-time organization of over 10,700 Posts and a million members.

California has over 470 Posts and there are eight in San Mateo county, with three more (not counting Half Moon Bay) in process of formation, and the local veterans feel that they should make a name for themselves and their home community in this great organization of ex-service men who have given so much for their community, state and nation.

In addition to the invitations that have been sent out, any World war veteran is invited to attend the meeting and become an active worker in the formation of the new Post.

Exhibitions of the sport that brought social leaders into the open before golf and autos were given before a gay gallery which thronged the San Mateo Gymkhana Club.

Victims of an automobile crash, Fred W. Cunningham, of San Mateo, and Miss Marjorie Timmons, of Los Angeles, are in a Dos Palos hospital. The couple were injured when their automobile crashed into a San Joaquin river bridge 20 miles from Merced.

San Mateo-Burlingame Camp No. 130, United Spanish War Veterans, was inaugurated last Monday with impressive ceremonies at the American Legion club house in Burlingame. State officials of the organization launched the new camp and seated its officers.

Members of the state assembly who are engaged in cutting the salaries of all state employes from 5 to 37 per cent last Monday refused to vote to cut their own salaries 10 per cent.

IMPROVED CONDITION OF STATE INDUSTRIES

Concrete evidence that improvement in the condition of many California industries was under way prior to the launching of the inflation policy are brought out in a statewide survey reported in the April issue of the Bank of America Business Review.

Employment in the construction field increased 25 per cent in March over the preceding month, while the number of men employed in building and assembling automobiles in March of this year was 52 per cent higher than in the like month of 1932. Cannery work increased appreciably, and the return of legal beer swelled the brewery, trucking company and glass manufacturers' payrolls.

Building permits of thirty-two California cities increased 46.9 per cent last month. While this showing was influenced by rebuilding plans following the Southern California earthquake, the rise was not entirely attributable to the catastrophe, for the aggregate total of building permits for eight Western states was 28.1 per cent above the showing for February.

Numerous favorable factors became apparent in the agricultural industry of California last month. The principal price increase was registered by hops, the value of which rose to 150 per cent over the 1932 showing. Advances in the price of beans in March are estimated to have added potential value of $663,000 to this year's crop. After sagging in March, butter prices scored a favorable increase during the first three weeks of April.

Killing frost which struck the inland valleys of the state during the first half of the current month augmented the effect of voluntary curtailment plans, resulting in a general reduction in the available quantity of fruits crops now overproduced. As a partial result, the orderly movement of food products out of storage and the prolongation of favorable price levels are reported.

Struck by a speeding automobile, 8-year-old Robert Mercer, of Louisville, Ky., was hurled into the branches of a tree, but suffered only a broken leg.

..MINING NOTES..

Officials of the Reward Mining Company have received word from Barkerville that work being done on its property on Island Mountain, adjoining the property of the Cariboo Gold Quartz Mining Company, where a two thousand foot tunnel is being driven, has resulted in cutting a vein about eight feet in width. The vein gives every indication of being one of the most important so far uncovered and was encountered within the first fifty feet of work.

The Consolidated Mines and Smelting Company of Canada, operating a smelter at Tadanac, near Rossland, has leased sections of the Rossland Mounted Police guardroom. It was guarded by members of the force, who were receiving $1.25 a day as pay. Throughout the frenzied period when fortunes were made over-night in the Klondyke, not one particle of gold entrusted to the care of the Mounted Police went astray.

WHERE THE GOLD DUST COMES FROM

Scene at mining property of J. W. Marchbank in the Northwest, showing Mr. Marchbank is carrying out ideas advocated in these columns.

More than twenty-five miles of new ground has been located in the Atlin mining district during the past year, according to reports to the Mines Department of British Columbia. Production of gold in the district was better last year than in the previous year. Prospects for the coming season are better than they have been for some time.

"The Trail of '98", an article in a recent issue of the Vancouver Sun, brings back vividly to pioneers of the Dawson Rush many memories of the historic gold stampede. The "story" gives details of the work of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, which was an important factor in the maintenance of order in the Yukon. It is recalled that when the bank in Dawson was destroyed by fire in 1898, gold nuggets and gold dust valued at millions of dollars were moved to the mines. This is good news for miners at present unemployed. The extension of operations will necessitate the hiring of a large number of men.

Alexander Mackenzie, director of the Burns Mountain Gold Quartz Mines, has announced the purchase of a full carload of mine machinery, comprising compressors, drills, diesel engines, tanks, generators, powder, and drill steel, together with groceries and other supplies.

Burns Mountain Gold Quartz Mines have twenty-two claims on Burns Mountain, southwest of the Cariboo Gold operations. The tunnel on the property is now in more than 350 feet and the equipment recently purchased will be rushed to the property and installed at once.

The crew at the mines will be doubled and three shifts put on. The tunnel is already equipped with rail and ore cars.

Pari Mutuel Racing Bill Would be Aid to Breeders

Expansion in the breeding of race horses in California is already under way, and if Governor Rolph signs the pari mutuel racing bill, passed by the Legislature, further impetus will be given to the movement. In the old days millions of dollars were invested in thoroughbred nurseries in this state, and conservative sportsmen expect breeding on even a larger scale in the next few years.

Charles A. Hartwell, who has been turning out horses for some time capable of winning on the important tracks of the country, said he is in touch with three men of affairs who are contemplating purchasing well equipped haras in the San Francisco bay region. They have come here from Wyoming and other states for the purpose of establishing homes and having the pleasure that only comes from seeing home-bred runners under colors on such courses as Tanforan in the West and on Eastern tracks. Hartwell may sell his Santa Rita Farm, near Pleasanton, to one of the sportsmen, including stallions, broodmares, yearlings and sucklings. The deal probably will go through on word from Sacramento that the racing bill has become a statute of this state.

Negotiations for the transfer of other farms are hanging fire pending the final disposition of the racing legislation. Hartwell has thoroughbred holdings in Hawaii as well as in California, and keeps the well known stock horse Rodgers and brood mares on the islands. If he disposes of Santa Rita to one of the newcomers in the sport, brought here by the racing bill, plans of the breeders may mature for acquiring another farm.

Alma Spreckels Rosekrans, daughter of the late A. B. Spreckels, John D. Spreckels III, and other members of the Spreckels family either are owners of thoroughbred nurseries at present or plan to buy places for the rearing of runners. Mrs. Rosekrans has a farm at Woodside, with the well known Runstar as premier stallion. A. B. Spreckels owned Napa Stock Farm, where the Kentucky Derby winner Morovich and other great horses were bred.

MARCH GASOLINE TAX LESS THAN THAT PAID LAST YEAR

Gasoline tax revenues for March were 5.6 per cent less than the same month in 1932, according to Fred E. Stewart, member of the State Board of Equalization, who reported collections were $3,253,917 from this tax last March.

"Considering that the bank holiday occurred during the month, when general business fell to an extreme low, the loss shown is nominal," Stewart asserted.

Conservation Camps to Open in National Forests

One additional camp will be located in the California section of the Siskiyou National Forest of Oregon.

Regional Forester S. B. Snow, chief of the California Region, U. S. Forest Service, will be in charge of the conservation corps activities in the national forests and will also coordinate all state, county and private C. C. C. projects in California. Mr. Snow, who is now in Washington, D. C., conferring with Robert Fechner, the director of emergency conservation work, and Major R. Y. Stuart, chief of the U. S. Forest Service, is expected back shortly to direct the Federal forestry activities. C. B. Morse, assistant regional forester of the U. S. Forest Service at Ogden, Utah, will be stationed at the Presidio of San Francisco to act as liason officer in coordinating the work of the Forest Service and Army throughout the Ninth Corps Area, comprising the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, Montana, and Wyoming.

California's national quota for the C. C. C. camps will be 33,000 men, who will first be concentrated in Army posts, where they will be fed, clothed and exercised for a period prior to their transfer to field camps. Thus far instructions are to enroll only unmarried men between the ages of 18 and 25 years, who are citizens of California, and have dependents. Each applicant will be required to take an oath and sign an agreement to turn over a certain percentage of his $1.00 a day pay to his dependents. Recruiting will be handled by local relief agencies under the general direction of R. C. Branion of the State Department of Social Welfare.

The Army will have full charge of all C. C. C. camps, and will have an officer with necessary assistants in each camp. It will also transport the men from the concentration posts to the field camps. All camps will be operated on the basis of 200 men.

The U. S. Forest Servie will handle all men engaged on forestry work in the national forests, including their transportation between camp and work points.

The Roosevelt conservation program, according to Forest Service officers, will afford an opportunity for the accomplishment of productive work on the national forests, for which detailed plans have been prepared, but which otherwise could not be completed for many years because of the lack of government appropriations.

The following constructive work will be done by the conservation corps workers: The clearing of fire-breaks; development of camp grounds; erosion and flood control projects; building of lookout houses, telephone lines, guard cabins and administrative improvements; tree planting; improvement of the range by the construction of watering places and drift fences; reseeding of denuded ranges, and the eradication of poisonous forage plants; rodent control; construction of trails, bridges and secondary roads; control of the pine beetle infestations and other similar projects.

SAVES TELEPHONE LINE BY SHOOTING WIRES OFF POLE

During a recent rain storm, it was reported that high water had washed out a pole on a telephone line owned jointly by an oil and a telephone company near Graham, Texas. J. C. Jones, of Albany, Texas, a telephone employee, and a man employed by the oil company, went out together to investigate the situation.

They discovered the flood threatening to sweep the pole, with wires attached, down the stream. Unable to reach the top of the pole, to release it from its wires, Jones secured a rifle from his car, took careful aim, and one by one he shot the insulators off the crossarm. In this way he released the wires so that they swung high above the current.

Reading about the forthcoming Chicago world's fair reminded Mrs. Henry Bacon of that city to get a divorce from her husband, who disappeared while on his way to become a guard at the Columbia Exposition in 1893. Judge Normoyle thought 40 years was long enough for her to await Henry's return and granted the decree on grounds of desertion.

The only two women members of the 1933 Texas legislature are Mrs. Sarah T. Hughes of Dalles, an attorney who sits in the House of Representatives, and Miss Margie Neal of Carthage in the Senate.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

1903 Grads To Meet

Announcement has been made that the thirtieth annual reunion of the class of 1903 of the University of California will be held on the Berkeley campus on Saturday evening, May 13.

First Blossoms Go East

Orange blossoms, gathered from the earliest blooming trees in Tulare county, were sent to Washington by Susman Mitchell of Visalia, that they might reach President Roosevelt in time for Easter.

Modesto Dry Laws Repealed

At a recent special city election Modesto voted almost 3 to 1 to repeal both the "Little Volstead Act" and the 1917 local option ordinance. The proposal to lower water rates was defeated.

Summer Camp To Open

California's summer camp, near Quincy in the Plumas National Forest, used by the division of forestry in the college of agriculture, University of California, will open May 12 and close on August 5.

Black Goose Egg

Frank Pelch, who maintains a bird sanctuary near Santa Barbara, found a jet black goose egg recently. It was laid by a bird which he classed as being a cross between a wild mallard and a peking duck.

Orange County Report

The report for marriage licenses issued in Orange county, show a total of 515 in January and February, of this year, as compared with 489 during the same period in 1932.

Earth Movements Checked

Reports that the Santa Lucia mountains are moving seaward are being checked by ten members of the United States geodetic survey, who are working in the mountains near Monterey.

Lettuce Shipments Decrease

With the lettuce season in the Imperial Valley about over for the 1933 season, indications are that the car lot shipments will fall below the past year's figure. Shipments are running approximately 200 cars less this year than last.

College Enrollment Gains

A recent announcement by H. M. Showman, recorder of the University of California at Los Angeles, said that economic conditions had not affected adversely the enrollment totals at the University . . . . enrollment for the academic year 1932-33 at the Los Angeles institution was 7171, the largest in the history of the university. This is a 5 per cent gain over last year.

Water Tunnel Started

Work has been started on the channel which will bring water to Springville from the Mt. Whitney Ditch company's Nichols, Woods, Mitch, Millinghausen and Bogart ranch ditches. The channel is being cut through granite, which project was adopted after it was found that the posibility of building a flume around the obstruction would be more expensive.

State School Inspection

Governor Rolph has signed the bill passed by the State Legislature which directs the State architect to supervise inspection of plans and construction of public schools in the State, as a safeguard against earthquake damage. The cost of State supervision is to be charged back to local school districts according to a sliding scale apportioning the charges in ratio to construction costs.

Cow Testing Ass'n Report

For February, a short month, the cow-testing association of San Bernardino county reports some big production records—in which the high cow of the Association was in the herd of C. Iest of Chino, with a yield of 105.6 pounds of butter fat. Second came a cow in the herd of Thomas Hendricks, also of Chino, which produced 103.1 pounds of fat in the month. Mr. Hendrick's herd had the highest herd average, amounting to 45.9 pounds of fat for the month.

Forest Fire Season Near

J. E. Elliott, supervisor of the San Bernardino National Forest stated recently that forest fire protective crews would be sent into the mountains ahead of time this season unless more rain falls. Heretofore the fire protection forces were sent into the national forests about June 1st, but the dry winter may make it necessary to start the program in May, as the fire hazard is becoming more acute on the lower slopes, according to Supervisor Elliott.

State Buys Game Birds

The State Fish and Game Commission have purchased, at bargain prices 7200 quail and 1800 pheasants, from several individuals, who have been raising these birds commercially under State permit. The purchase was made because economic conditions have made raising of upland birds less profitable than former years. With the quail and pheasants raised on the game farms of the State, the full quota needed for the year's program to increase these species of game birds has now been filled.

Fire Loss Small

According to a recent announcement by Fire Chief William G. Lutkey of Oakland, the city's fire loss during the month of March was the smallest monthly loss in thirty years. Fire loss during the month totaled $6458.25, with 3740,457 worth of property involved. In March, 1932, the fire loss was 770,236.

"Cash And Carry" System Pays

The fruit tree bloom in the Yucaipa Valley is much heavier this year than usual, and the cherries are especially promising. A local grower, who has two orchards in the Valley, states that cherries paid him better last year than peaches and plums. He was responsible for the adopting of the "cash and carry" system on cherries, which was reported as profitable.

Railway Agencies To Close

The State Railroad Commission has authorized the following service changes, and agencies' closing: the closing of the Santa Fe station at La Miranda, Los Angeles county, and to maintain part-time employee; Southern Pacific to close agency at Villa Park, Orange county, and the same road to discontinue operation of its passenger service on certain trains between Galt, Sacramento county and Ione, Amador county.

Fruit Packers Sales Gain

California fruit packers sold a monthly average of 1,264,659 cases of canned peaches, pears, apricots and cherries in the nine months, ended March 1, against 1,118,845 in the like period of the preceding crop year. Total unsold stocks of four fruits were 3,729,132 cases, against 6,513,055 on March 1, 1932, a reduction of 42.8 per cent. At the rate of sale, inventory remaining at the end of the crop year June 1, will be the smallest in recent years.

Turkey Celebration Planned

"Ramona, a Paradise for Poultry," referring to chickens, has been the slogan in the Ramona section for a number of years, but of late this branch of the poultry business has been abandoned by some of the larger producers, for the raising of turkeys. The local turkey club, with a membership of thirty, is credited with the possession of 15,000 birds, of which 2000 are breeders. Plans are in the making for the staging of a turkey celebration by the turkey club sometime this fall.

School Officials Meet

At the recent two-day session of the Public Schools Business Officials' Association held in Bakersfield W. H. Cox of Alameda was elected president, with the following aides selected: James H. Parker, assistant superintendent of the Bakersfield city schools, treasurer; John T. Cate, of Glendale, first vice-president; John Edgemond, Oakland, second vice-president; S. C. Joynier, Pasadena, secretary; Miss C. Andrews, Berkeley, A. Knoll, Long Beach, and George Crawford, of San Diego, directors. It is expected the 1934 session will be held in Alameda, the home of the new president.

California Growers Elated

California canners, dried fruit factors and fruit growers were elated recently over the spectacular rise in the pound sterling rate from around 33.55 to 34.10. This advance more than offset the 15 per cent protective tariff differential in England favoring the British Colonies. Australia is now engaged in shipping 950,000 cases of canned peaches, pears and apricots to England, the pack in Australia being made in what in the northern hemisphere are the winter months. California has been unable to compete successfully with Australian producers in the face of the differential established by the British tariff. The offsetting of this differential through the rise in sterling, however, again opens the British markets to California products, and is expected to result in a stiffening in canned goods prices.

Road Camps Healthy

A recent check-up made by C. C. Rossi, superintendent of State road camps in Southern California, showed that over a six weeks' period most of the men gained in weight anywhere from seven to thirty-one pounds, and only four men lost weight. The survey was made at the highway camp in the Arroyo Seco area of Los Angeles county where 250 men were working. The check-up revealed that California's "hard work and no pay" labor camp policy for non-resident itinerants was building up a healthy and robust young manhood. A potent reason given for this gain in avoirdupois, in addition to the stimulus of vigorous exercise in the open air, was the good food served. In return for their board and keep the men had done the following work from October 15 to February 25, in preparing the right-of-way for an extension of the Arroyo Seco highway: Cleared 49 acres; built five miles of trails; burned 23 acres, moved 1000 yards of roadway excavation, moved 3500 yards of slides, and built terraces for erosion control on six and a half miles of hill slope.

State Awards Contracts

Contracts have been awarded by the State Department of Public Works for road work in Santa Barbara, Contra Costa and Santa Cruz counties. In Santa Barbara county $28,158 will be spent for construction of an overhead grade separation at Elwood. The contract in Contra Costa calls for the expenditure of $3475 for furnishing and spreading oil on roads in Mount Diablo Park. In Santa Cruz county the $1662.50 contract calls for furnishing and spreading fuel oil as a dust palliative on about seven miles of road.

Normandy Dons Festival Attire

Greets Spring With Quaint Age-Old Ceremonies.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

NORMANDY is planning for apple blossom time. Like Winchester, in the Valley of Virginia, and other great apple-growing regions of America, Normandy fares forth in festival attire when the buds of its famous apple trees burst in the spring.

Although the French are largely a wine-imbibing people, the natives of Normandy drink apple cider. There, you can't eat a meal without cider, you can't be born without cider, and you can't get married or die without cider. The old duchy, slightly smaller than the state of Maryland, is one huge orchard.

Even "When it's apple blossom time in Normandy," however, the duchy has many world-famous spots that also attract the attention of the traveler—Rouen, Deauville, Cherbourg, Havre, Bayeux, Honfleur, Dieppe, Falaise, Alencon.

Northmen swooping down, raiding, destroying, but finally settling on the land and giving it a softened form of their name; stalwart son of duke and tanner's daughter crossing the channel to make world history at Hastings; Norman dukes reigning in England; the king of the English reigning in Normandy. Armored knights clanking about, in London, Sicily, Naples, at the tomb of Christ. The Maid burnt at the stake. Daring sons of Normandy roaming the seas to fish, to explore and colonize unknown lands, from Newfoundland to the Antarctic, to the South Seas, around the world. Normans building lordly castles, chateaux, cathedrals, and abbeys of distinctive "Norman architecture," painting pictures, writing poetry, plays, and novels of enduring fame. Poussin and Millet, Pierre Corneille, Alain Chartier and Malherbe, Flaubert, De Maupassant, and others—a Norman galaxy.

Normandy does more than sit around and dream of the long ago. Through Havre, second seaport of France; through Cherbourg, it saw some of the legions pass to the western front. It has greeted kings and queens, admirals and generals, and heard the roar of cannon salutes, the hum of sky craft. Through these ports today pass travelers from the western world, and processions of consuls, agents, buyers, salesmen, ambassadors of commerce of every kind—hunters all, scenting the romance and adventure in foreign trade, in anything from anchovies to antiques.

Dress designers, looking to Paris for the first and last word on fashions, send "scouts" to the golden beaches of Deauville and its less aristocratic vis-a-vis, Trouville. Here, where the beau monde disports itself in season beneath gaily striped tents, at the casinos, along the promenades, and at the races, the gods and goddesses of style display their latest creations on beautiful women.

Back from white chalk cliffs and sandy beaches stretches a green and pleasant land of winding streams, fertile grain fields and pastures, hedgerows, orchards, well-kept farms, and villages of thatched cottages. There are hills and dales and glens, forests and waterfalls, and the typically Norman long, straight roads.

Famous for Cattle.

And cows! Innumerable herds spot the lush meadows everywhere, but especially in the Contentin, the peninsula which points toward England. It has given its name to a Norman breed of cattle famous for beef, but more so for milk production. Paris drinks Normandy's milk and cream, and both London and Paris eat its fresh butter and cheese—Camembert, Neufchatel, Pont L'Eveque—with histories as distinguished as the duchy's own.

In one field men in blue smocks are loading hay into carts drawn by ponderous horses. "They're percherons!" exclaims the horse lover from the Middle West. "My Indiana neighbor used to import carloads of them. Don't they remind you of Rosa Bonheur's 'Horse Fair?' As a matter of fact, most of her models for that picture were percherons."

Another Normandy product is its patois; one's school book French will not serve here. In the daily common speech one authority has counted some 5,000 words which are foreign to French.

On an early visit to England, the future Conqueror found Normans everywhere. There were "Norman prelates in the bishoprics, Norman lords and soldiers in the fortresses, Norman captains and sailors in the seaports." The Conquest itself affected every phase of England's national activities, especially its political and social institutions. One writer has called attention to the fact that for more than 800 years the British parliament has used Norman French when imploring the king to approve or reject its laws.

Though the old Norse language died out quickly in Normandy, it left tokens of its Scandinavian origin in such place names as Dieppe, "deep"; in Harfleur and Barfleur, fleur, the Norse fliot, meaning "small river"; in Yvetot, Ivo's "toft" or "inclosure." Another proof that this is the land of William the Conqueror lies in the fair-haired Scandinavian types which persist to this day in various districts.

As to the origin of the Norman's inclination to "hedge" on every question, let historians argue as they will, but it is a fact that one must usually labor hard to extract a plain yes or no from him. "Was the apple crop large this year?" You ask. His classic reply is: "Well, for a good apple year, it is not too good; but for a bad apple year, it is not too bad!"

The tendency to avail himself of subtle distinctions may account for the Norman's reputation as a somewhat grasping character, and his fondness for legal forms and lawsuits has earned for him and his fellows the title of "the lawyers of France."

For all that, the Norman has his own traditions of fun and good fellowship. Remember, he likes his cider! And never Norman more so than one Oliver Basselin, he of the red nose, who sang songs in praise of hard cider long before Villon roistered and recited in Paris wine shops. Basselin ran a fulling mill near the little valley known as Vaux de Vire. From it his songs took their name, and these, in turn, gave rise to the corrupted term "vaudeville."

Natural Curiosity.

Thirty miles southwest of Vire, as the crow flies, on the border between Normandy and Brittany, towers the duchy's most imposing natural curiosity and its finest coastal monument of the Middle ages—stupendous Mont Saint Michel. It is a granite islet 3,000 feet in circumference, girt with immense walls and towers, plastered with houses climbing up its sides, and the whole crowned with an ancient abbey, shrine of the Archangel Michael, saint of high places. Lovers of the unique find in its historical associations, in the grandeur of its outward aspect, an appeal and a fascination similar to those of Carcassonne.

East of Vire is Falaise, where Robert the Devil, the Magnificent, looked out of the castle window and saw Arlette, the tanner's daughter. Another story goes that he first saw her washing clothes at the fountain one day when he was returning from the chase. However, it was, her "pretty feet twinkling in the brook" led to her becoming the mother of the Conqueror.

North of Falaise is Caen, a Norman Athens and unrivaled center for the study of Norman art. Here the Normans' extraordinary faculty for adaptation appears at its best. Though they invented little that was new, they adopted from other countries, developed and improved. French language and literature, French feudal doctrines, and Romanesque architecture in particular bear the stamp of their genius. In Norman hands this architectural form from northern Italy became a distinctive, living thing, marked by great size, simplicity, and massiveness, and love of geometric ornament. The two abbeys founded here by the Conqueror and his wife are superb examples of the architecture which preceded the rise of the early Gothic in the Thirteenth century, and which also crossed the channel even before the Conquest.

The Conqueror was buried in one of these abbeys, and Matilda, his cousin-wife, in the other. Both were built with the hope of conciliating the pope regarding their marriage.

What a courtship was William's! A seven-year siege of Matilda's hand, disdain from the lady, slights not to be endured, and finally a wrathy lover rushing into Matilda's presence, seizing her by the hair, dragging her about the room, striking her, flinging her to the floor. After that she said yes!

Gathered His Hosts.

Still farther north is Dives. Here, in those stirring days of 1066, the future victor at Hastings gathered together "an innumerable host of horsemen, slingers, and foot soldiers," wild, adventurous spirits, the war strength of northern Europe, eager for the battle over the sea. In the river's mouth lay some 700 ships. The largest could hold fifty knights with all their horses and men; the smallest boats were not even decked over and were loaded to the gunwales with stores and provisions, including small grinding mills for the grain.

For pictorial history of the Conquest, go to Bayeux and look at the fifty-eight scenes embroidered on linen—the famous Bayeux tapestry. Probably no other fabric anywhere in the world surpasses it in interest and importance. Crude though it is in design, and partly defaced, it nevertheless recreates a momentous period in world history.

But all Norman roads lead to Rouen at last. Rouen, "Gothic Queen of France" and the duchy's ancient capital, where "each monument is a book, each stone a souvenir." Yet, more than architecture, more than antiquities, Joan of Arc is the strongest lure; for Rouen is her town, saturated with glorious and tragic memories of her. Her spirit still hovers over the market place where, condemned for "having fallen back into the errors," she went to fiery martyrdom.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—President Roosevelt is seeing the start of a great national project that is for him the realization of a dream he has nursed for years. His ideas for reforestation of idle lands have been enacted into law that lumber requirements of future years may be met. Thousands of men are being drawn from the ranks of the unemployed in a score of cities and are receiving their training that they as the Civilian Conservation corps may go into designated areas to replant the forests that have been devastated by the ever-encroaching hands of industry.

Roosevelt's Dream

Mr. Roosevelt looks upon the program that may cost as much as $300,000,000 as work that is made with a definite purpose and a definite value to the country. It is possible to employ 250,000 men under the terms of the blanket authority given the President by congress. Each man will be paid one dollar a day and his keep; he is under disciplinary supervision of the army and is fed and clothed on the same basis as the military man. The theory is that he can send most of his pay back to his family, thus relieving local charity of that charge.

In purpose, the reforestation movement is broader than just the planting of new trees; it is to be a scientific job in that engineers will consider the areas to be forested with a view to prevention of floods and for the checking of soil erosion or washing, and for the utilization of lands the value of which for crops is doubted. The several units, therefore, constitute a gigantic move for conservation of resources of a national character and the program as a whole bears the stamp of a relief measure for destitute citizens.

The President is under no illusions about the project. In chats with newspaper correspondents he has made it clear that he realizes the total of unemployed to be given work is only a drop in the bucket. But he contends even that number gainfully employed will have some effect on the general situation and that they are doing a useful work. Advocates of conservation of national resources agree that the work is useful, yet among many others there is a doubt as to the wisdom of expending funds in this way.

In this connection, some of the argument used in debate on the legislation may show the trend of thought. It was declared, for example, that an outstanding weakness of the plan, from an unemployment standpoint, is the full time use of a limited number rather than a part time or half time use of double the number, accomplishing a distribution of the work. Such a result obviously could not be had if the work was in the forests and the workers away from home without attendant expenses of food and clothing for the larger number. Hence, it was argued that work should have been made in the home communities of the men. And the further question was asked whether this type of work was worth the price, since it constituted a burden upon the present taxpayers for production of a future asset.

Considerable complaint has reached Washington about the methods employed in recruiting the men for service of the forestation work. Officials charged with supervision of the work say, however, that objections and criticisms are to be expected and that their instructions to the recruiting agencies naturally must leave some discretionary powers to the subordinates.

Recruiting Criticized

In addition to the "red tape" so usual in government affairs and not lacking in administration of the forestation program, reports here indicate a tendency on the part of some recruiting officers to be dictatorial and to refuse to co-operate with local charitable institutions. Corps headquarters here denies that local charitable agencies have not been consulted so that the most deserving individuals may get a chance to join the civilian service if they desire.

At any rate, the picture of the great program for restoring the country's forests and providing work at the same time holds forth indications of trouble. In fairness, it ought to be said, according to general opinion here, that Mr. Roosevelt has promoted a scheme of exceedingly high purpose but that it is of the character that permits extreme abuse exactly as do so many idealistic plans. I have heard some of the President's supporters in congress express fear concerning the eventual reaction of the country to the plan. That, of course, is a political phase, but it nevertheless points out one of the possibilities.

A few years ago, it was quite the thing to issue bonds to pay for public improvements. States, counties, cities, towns, school districts, road districts, levee districts, drainage districts, irrigation districts and every other subdivision of government was issuing bonds with reckless abandon and making improvements galore. I have been unable to obtain from any source an accurate figure as to the total amount of such bonds, but without doubt they run into a good many billions of dollars.

Bonds and Empty Treasuries

But now the day of reckoning is at hand. Bonds must be paid off and retired by many communities, or if the principal is not due, there is yet the interest to be met. And the treasuries are empty!

So it was only natural that the theory of scaling down those debts should be examined and in consequence of this, Representative Wilcox, of Florida, has introduced in the house a bill providing for any subdivision of government to declare itself bankrupt and ask the bankruptcy court to help it arrange a composition with its creditors. There is, of course, nothing new or radical about that bill. It presents the only way out, both for the communities which sold the bonds during its wild orgy of spending, and for the investors who acquired the bonds. In the case of the community which bonded itself, the bankruptcy court presents a way by which a part of the debts can be paid and the city's finances, or whatever subdivision it may be, can be arranged to meet new conditions. In the case of the bondholder, it is either go along with the community in a co-operative spirit, share part of the loss and provide a chance for the debtor to pay out, or see the whole investment go up in thin air.

With reference to the Wilcox bill, I was told by a representative whose district lies within the city of New York that enactment of such legislation would damage the credit of that great city. People would fear that its bonds also would become worthless or that they would have to accept a proposal for composition of all claims, each creditor taking a proportionate share. My answer was that any person holding a bond of a city or county or road district school district or what not cannot possibly be so blind as to avoid seeing the true facts. If the city of New York can meet its obligations, it has nothing to fear; if it cannot do so, why should it try to "kid" the people?

Might Hurt City's Credit

I mention New York as an example, and because there are a score of other cities in the same situation. They are not insolvent as long as the people can pay the taxes laid upon them. People are not paying taxes, however, because they cannot do so, in many scores of localities. So a thorough study of the entire situation would seem to force the conclusion that some legislation such as the Wilcox bill is inevitable. Creditors must take half a loaf as better than no bread at all.

The Wilcox bill proposes that when a community is in default on its bonds, it may seek the aid of the federal court and negotiate an adjustment which, if it be acceptable to three-fourths of the creditors, calculated on the amount of the claims or bonds they hold, the other one-fourth becomes bound by the court decision or affirmation of the agreement. The bill would compel the taxing district to make preparation in advance for raising revenue to pay off the revised debt so that there could be some assurance of final settlement.

But the Wilcox bill is having its troubles in getting onto the greased runways of favored legislation. Despite the fact that the theory of it is precisely the same as the Roosevelt theory about scaling down debts owed by farmers and by owners of homes in town, there has been no nod of instruction from the White House thus far to put the legislation through.

Few people in the country recognize how many cities, towns, townships and the various kinds of districts have defaulted on the payment of interest or principal or both. It is a condition that now has affected more than 300 communities, and May and June will see enormous additions to that total for in those months there are numerous bond issues on which either the interest or principal mature, and the issuing communities are without funds to meet the obligations. There are communities in 41 states right now where bond issues are in default, and this appalling condition shows no signs of abatement.

Hundreds in Default

Truly, the politicians who campaigned for such things and who claimed to be promoting great improvements for the common good are no longer in a position to serve their communities.

From pure curiosity, I examined some of the statistics for half a dozen or more communities whose bonds are in default, and they showed the amazing result of total bond issues in one or two instances that were as great as the appraised value of the property in the whole community. Theoretically, you know, a bond issue of that type constitutes a first lien (just like a mortgage) on factories, stores, residences and other property of the community. It is easy to see, therefore, why the names of those communities have been omitted from this analysis.

DEPRESSION TALK

"In times like these, we find ourselves in the midst of a serious financial and industrial crisis. It just seems inconceivable that conditions can ever right themselves enough to have prosperous times in the country again. Trade and industry throughout the land are disorganized. Banks by the hundreds have failed. Securities have fallen to one-half or even one-quarter of their former value.

"The problem of unemployment has become general, and in all large cities special committees have been organized to provide food and clothing for the poor and unemployed. In addition to this effort, some cities have caused relief work to be instigated by public bodies.

"The lessening demand for wheat exported to Europe has caused American wheat to sell for less than 50 cents a bushel. Extensive competition, lowering prices and unwise speculation have brought about a crisis abounding in rumor reports, most of which have no foundation and do great damage. The renewal of confidence and the allaying of violent fear in the minds of the people, which will allow for active buying, rather than money hoarding, must precede business recovery."

As is indicated by the quotation marks, the above language is not our own, but is that of someone else. And it was not uttered in 1933, either. It was from a speech by Daniel Webster, delivered in Detroit in 1837, nearly a century ago. Truly, history repeats itself.

A BRAVE PROPHET

Again the baseball pennant races are on, and sports writers are risking their reputations by predictions respecting the winners. Perhaps the bravest prognosticator of all is Damon Runyan, veteran sports scribe, who not only predicts the winners, but makes a complete list of how all the teams will stand at the end of the season. Here it is:

Nationals—Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Chicago, New York, Boston, Cincinnati.

Americans—New York, Washington, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit, Boston.

That Mr. Runyan doesn't think much of Boston's reputed culture is indicated by his placing the Hub's two teams in seventh and eighth place, respectively.

Chancellor Chamberlain says Britain's credit is now so good as to be "almost embarrassing." Well, the way some of us used our credit in the past is embarrassing us at the present time.

THE SITUATION

While the measures adopted by Congress looking to national rehabilitation, under the leadership of President Roosevelt, have so far met with general approval, more important legislation of far-reaching importance is still to be enacted, and until the exact nature of these measures is known there is bound to be more or less uncertainty and hesitation in the business world.

Some of the problems which are causing this hesitation are enumerated by B. C. Forbes, noted writer on business matters, as follows:

Uncertainty over what will be done to regulate new security issues; what will be done in the way of guaranteeing bank deposits; modification of tariffs; limiting of hours of labor; government control of the railroads; paying of bounties to farmers; taking over farm mortgages; further regulation of the utilities—these Mr. Forbes says are "some of the momentous matters which are engaging, not to say distracting, the minds of responsible men of affairs, responsible employers."

The truth seems to be that no forward movement of great consequence on the part of private business and industry can be expected until legislation along the lines mentioned is finally enacted. In other words, business and industry are waiting to find out the conditions under which they must operate in future before they go ahead.

While all are hoping that the new and revolutionary legislation embraced in President Roosevelt's program will prove beneficial to the country at large, the effects of this legislation will not become apparent until the special session of Congress adjourns and the results of its labors are definitely known.

WHAT IS A MAN WORTH

Recent agitation against fabulous salaries or other compensation paid to top-notchers in the business and amusement world have brought to light some amazing figures. Nearly everyone is familiar with the high values placed upon certain noted athletes, movie and radio stars. Also there is general knowledge that high railroad and other industrial executives have been receiving enormous salaries.

One outstanding example of extravagant remuneration for personal services is that received by George W. Hill, president of the American Tobacco Company. According to the official reports furnished to stockholders of that company, Mr. Hill has received salaries and bonuses as follows: In addition to a salary of $160,000 a year he received a bonus of $447,870 in 1929, $842,508 in 1930, $891,570 in 1931. In 1932 his salary was cut to $120,000, but in addition he received a bonus of $669,500, or a total of $789,500 for the year.

These large bonuses, it is understood, have been based upon the net earnings of the company, supposedly due to Mr. Hill's ability as a manager. And there is no doubt that he has been and is today one of the most efficient and successful executives in the world. In spite of the depression, his company has continued to make enormous profits. And during the four years since the business slump began he has received between $600,000 and $1,000,000 a year for his services.

The question arises as to whether he or any other man is entitled to receive that much money for managing any business, however large it may be. In other words, how much can the services of any man possibly be worth? A hard question to answer.

ADMIRAL W. A. MOFFETT

In the death of Rear Admiral William Adger Moffett, chief of the Naval bureau of aeronautics, who perished in the disaster to the dirigible Akron, the nation lost one of its most distinguished and gallant Naval officers.

He was born in Charleston, S. C., October 31, 1869, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1890. He served with Dewey at the battle of Manila in 1898, and was awarded the nation's highest military distinction, the Congressional Medal of Honor, "for eminent and conspicuous conduct in battle" in the capture of Vera Cruz, in 1914. He also received the Distinguished Service Medal "for exceptionally meritorius service in a position of great responsibility in the World war."

During his long and notable career he held many commands of high importance, and was known as a forceful and brilliant officer. He would have been retired for age in October of this year if he had lived.

Admiral Moffett was a strong advocate of the dirigible as a military weapon, and his enthusiasm for this instrument of warfare cost him his life. While many do not agree with his views in this particular branch of aeronautics, all must admire the courage he displayed in backing his opinions by risking and losing his life in his zeal to vindicate them.

HIS FATAL MISTAKE

This is the story of a prudent man, as told by a Kansas newspaper:

He brushed his teeth twice a day, wore rubbers in wet weather, did his daily dozen, slept with the windows open, was careful with his diet, had a medical examination twice a year, never smoked, drank, or indulged in any kind of excesses. He was all set to live to be 100 years old.

The funeral was held last Wednesday. He is survived by eighteen specialists, four health institutes, six gymnasiums and numerous manufacturers of health foods and antiseptics.

He had forgotten to look out for a train at a grade crossing.

GUARDING ONE'S HEALTH

How much one should worry about his health has been the subject for many arguments. Some hold that a periodical physical examination should be taken with a view to discovering any incipient diseases. Others believe that such examinations tend to make a person think too much about his health and that the consequent worry is worse than letting nature take its course.

A recent radio lecturer on heart disease, which is at present the most deadly of all ailments, suggested a middle course. While he advocated periodical physical examinations, he warned his listeners not to take them too seriously. Because, as he pointed out, many persons live for dozens of years with heart trouble, and finally die of something else.

But, as he further stated, the fact that one is concerned about his heart may cause him to adopt a mode of living which will not only tend to ease his heart strain, but will be beneficial to his general health as well. The same principle applies to other diseases.

Concluding, he repeated the sage advice of Sir William Osler, who said: "If you would live long, get a nice choric disorder and nurse it."

A GRAND SLAM

The thill that seldom comes but once in a lifetime came to Marie Allen, 18-year-old miss of Detroit, a few nights ago. In an auction bridge game she was dealt thirteen spades.

But she didn't even bid the hand. She was so flabbergasted that she merely spread it out face up on the table and gasped: "Isn't it grand?"

Even more remarkable is the fact that her opponents, with rare sportsmanship, waived the bidding rules and agreed to credit her with a grand slam.

TO THE WOMAN of the home an abundant supply of hot water always ready at the turn of a faucet is not a luxury—it's a downright necessity, especially to thrifty-minded women holding down household budgets by doing most of their own housework.

If the water heater in your home operates by lighting a match and waiting for hot water, much of the hot water needed in the kitchen is going to be tea kettle hot water.

And, of course, tea kettle heating of hot water is the most expensive of all methods of heating water in the home. A little waste at a time but many, many times a week this waste takes place.

There is waste too in the type of water heater you turn on and let run for the laundry work or bathing. Too much water is always heated. To heat water and not use it is like throwing money away because it costs money to heat that water and that money is wasted.

The most economical service of hot water for the home is that given by an Automatic Gas Water Heater. Just the right amount of hot water for the average home is kept stored hot in a thickly insulated tank. It is kept hot, automatically ready for service at any time of day or night at the turn of a faucet.

See the new Automatic Gas Water Heaters on display at the nearest P. G. and E. office or your local dealer's store. Special easy purchase terms are now in effect.

WE BACK UP

—This statement with facts: that statistics from the Census Department shows that the average number in an American family is four and one-fifth. We wonder if the one-fifth is father.

Another statement we'll back up is: that if we do the repair work on your car that it won't be done like a schoolboy washes his ears—we'll make a thorough job of it; and when we start on your job we don't waste our time looking for a wrench and then try to find a nut to fit the wrench.

"She's lying down; and the Cap'n's asleep, too. Can I go slide, Geoff?"

"Does Miss Nona let you?"

"'Course she lets me!"

"Well, be careful then and come back before Cynthia gets home or I'll catch thunder for letting you go," the young man admonished her.

He returned to his book and forgot all about the child. Presently the front door banged. Cary, probably, or Tenny back from her sliding. It was too early for Cynthia.

However, it was she. Geoff sprang to his feet and went forward to meet her.

"Anything wrong? Are you sick?" he asked.

"Just tired. Elsie said she'd hold the fort for the rest of the day and let me come home. Where is everybody?"

"Your mother is upstairs lying down. I have it on good authority that the Captain is asleep. Tenny's out sliding."

"Tenny's out—" She paused in her task of removing her gloves. "Who told her she might go? How long has she been out? Has she her galoshes on?" she inquired.

A sense of guilt began to pervade Geoff's mind. He remembered their talk at Red Rock lake; how Tenny must be guarded from colds.

"Cynthia, you'll want to slay me for this! I told her she might go. I didn't see any reason why she shouldn't go—every kid goes sliding when it snows—"

She wasted no words in discussion. "Where did she say she was going?"

"She didn't say! Oh, what a dumbbell I was not to have asked her! But she was all wrapped up," he said eagerly. "She had on her heavy coat and red cap—"

For answer Cynthia went to the closet beneath the stairs and brought out Tenny's small galoshes. "This snow is wet as wading in water," she said in a frightened voice. "Tenny had on those thin little slippers she wears in the house." She slipped on the coat she had just taken off and turned, her hand on the door-knob. "I'll go south, you go north. Look at all the side streets. If you find her, pick her up and carry her. Don't let her walk in this snow!"

Geoff dashed madly down the street in the direction Cynthia had indicated. His remorse knew no bounds.

"She'll probably get pneumonia and die," he assured himself with exaggerated pessimism. "Why didn't I think about galoshes? Why didn't I ask her where she was going? Why did I let her go at all?"

He scoured the neighborhood for blocks around without avail. At last, disheartened by his failure he returned to the house.

The first sound he heard when he opened the front door was Tenny's laugh. He bounded up the stairs and found the little girl, glowing from a bath, wrapped in a woolly robe and tucked into bed with an electric pad at her feet, listening enraptured to Cary, who was telling one of his funniest stories.

"You're a fine one, Miss Montague!" Geoff exclaimed, his relief going to his head like wine. "Where were you, I'd like to know!"

She laughed again. "I didn't know myself! Cynthia found me. It was snowing so hard and I got lost and the sled wouldn't go at all and my feet were sopping! And then Cynthia came along and carried me home—"

"Carried you! Cynthia!"

"She came staggering in with this young lady over her shoulder like a bale of hay," Cary put in.

"Where's Cynthia?" Geoff demanded.

"Straightening up the bathroom after the recent ablutions, I imagine," Cary answered.

Geoff made his way rapidly down the hall to the bathroom. Through the open door he saw Cynthia, her wet skirts clinging to her, stooping to pick up Tenny's small garments and she reeled a little as Geoff watched her.

"Look here! You must get those wet clothes off at once! Is there no one in this house who looks after you?" he demanded roughly. "Carrying that heavy child heaven alone knows how far—coming in and putting her to bed without changing your clothes—Cynthia, haven't you any sense at all?"

She looked at him vaguely. "I think she's all right now. I don't think she'll take cold," she answered.

For answer he pushed her down on a low chair and began removing her soaked shoes.

"I'm going to turn the water on in that tub and if you don't want me to put you in—" he threatened.

"All right. I'll do it myself," she answered, smiling but still with that new and alarming vagueness.

He went down to find Miss Nona and at once she was in a flutter of maternal anxiety. She brought Cynthia's bathrobe to her, insisted that she have her dinner in bed. It was a depleted circle which met at dinner.

Geoff had been asleep about two hours when he was awakened by a sound: somebody's harsh, hoarse cough. He sat up, thinking instantly of Tenny. The child had caught cold after all! How worried Cynthia would be! With the thought of Cynthia came the realization that the sound which had waked him proceeded from Cynthia's room. In a minute he had donned bathrobe and slippers and was tapping at her door.

When she did not answer he went in. Cynthia was tossing restlessly about on the pillows. Her cheeks were scarlet with fever; now and then she gave that hoarse, distressing cough.

It took but a moment to wake Miss Nona; another to learn the name of the family doctor and summon him by telephone. Cary and the Captain were aroused and came to offer their services.

It was Geoff and Miss Nona, however, who carried out the doctor's instructions. Geoff proved of such value as a nurse that when, toward morning, it became evident that Cynthia was seriously ill, it was to him that Doctor Bigham confided the fact that she must be taken at once to a hospital.

"I could get nurses here, of course," the physician said thoughtfully. "But it'll be easier to have her in the hospital. Besides, I want to get her away from here. She's been under a terrific strain for two years. Why some of you didn't see it," he said irritably, "is more than I can understand. For two years now she's carried a load that would test the endurance of an ox."

"You mean the gift shop?" Geoff asked.

"I mean—everything," Doctor Bigham said largely. "Look here! Cynthia's conscious—or partly so, and she's worrying about something she calls her household budget. I've promised you'd take it off her hands—run it the way she does. That all right?"

Geoff looked startled. "You must mean the shop. Miss Nona looks after the house—"

"She does nothing of the kind. Cynthia's the purse-holder in this family—and with reason, as you'll soon find out. Now just step into her room," he went on briskly, "and make her understand that you're prepared to pay all bills, order what needs to be ordered—that kind of thing. I can't have her worried about such trifles."

Geoff, hesitatingly approaching Cynthia's bed, was startled at the change in her. The blue eyes seemed sunk far back in her head. Her lips were fever-dry. She breathed with difficulty and when she saw Geoff and tried to speak, she began to cough.

"Don't talk," he entreated. "I just came in to say that everything'll be all right, Cynthia. You're not to worry. I'll keep track of expenses—"

"Out of our own money?" she whispered. "You won't use any of your own to pay the bills?"

"I won't use any of mine. I promise," he told her, wondering a little at this request.

For Answer He Pushed Her Down on a Low Chair and Began Removing Her Soaked Shoes.

She seemed satisfied and dozed off and Geoff tiptoed out to consult the doctor.

"Look here! What've you let me in for? I don't know anything about the Aylesbury's financial affairs. I don't know what their income is—"

"Elsie Dunsmore can tell you," Doctor Bigham said absently. "They live on what Cynthia makes at the shop."

Geoff stared at him. "Doctor, you must be mistaken!"

The physician's quick ire rose. "I must, must I? I suppose I wasn't called when the Captain lost not only all his own money but what was left of Aylebury's—I suppose I wasn't called to look after Miss Nona then? Cynthia came home from college—"

"What!"

"Of course. Cary and Miss Nona between them had run through what little there was left. Cary wrote Cynthia and she gave up her college work and came home. Opened the Odds and Ends with what her father left her. With Tenny's board—and yours, I suppose?"

Geoff nodded.

"With that and the profits from the shop, Cynthia's kept them all going somehow."

"But the Captain's royalties? Mr. Aylesbury's estate?" Geoff's head was in his hands, his eyes were haggard.

"Those royalties amount to about eight or ten dollars a month. Aylesbury's estate—isn't. Cynthia keeps up a polite fiction that it's invested in her shop but that's just to soothe Miss Nona's feelings."

"But she—Miss Nona—the Captain, too—they're always talking as if they wanted Cynthia to give up the shop; as if it was a whim on her part."

"Of course. It's soothing to the Captain's pride to believe that he has plenty of money and that the gift shop is a fad of Cynthia's; so he does believe it."

"But Miss Nona?"

The doctor shrugged. "Money means nothing in her life! A pretty, sweet-mannered woman but about as practical as a pink morning glory." He rose. "That's the ambulance now. I'm putting you in charge at this end of the line, remember! I'll look after Cynthia—you look after Cynthia's family!"

CHAPTER VI

Cynthia's Family.

That Sunday lingered in Geoff's memory for many a long day.

"If I hadn't gone sliding—and I didn't slide, because the snow was too wet!—would Cynthia not have got sick?" Tenny demanded, her small face white with anxiety.

Geoff took her on his lap and gave her a detailed explanation.

"Cynthia caught cold yesterday hunting you—that's true," he said. "But Doctor Bigham says it wouldn't have hurt her if she hadn't been so tired from working in the shop. You weren't to blame, Tenny. The thing we've got to do is to keep this house running till Cynthia is well again."

"Who's going to plan the meals?" Tenny was a practical child.

"Meals? Why, Miss Nona, of course. Good heavens, you don't mean—"

"Cynthia always plans 'em. And she gives Marguerite just enough money to pay for the day's supplies because if you buy things in quantity for a colored person they waste 'em." Geoff could detect all too clearly Cynthia's pronouncement in this echo.

His fears proved to be well grounded. Marguerite appeared soon after dinner, note-book and pencil in hand.

"Miss Nona say you gwine run the house, Mist' Geoff," she remarked. "Miss Cynthia she plan Monday meals foh I go off on Sunday aftehnoon."

"Good lord!" Geoff recoiled from the task presented to him. "Can't Miss Nona look after that part of it?"

Marguerite shook her head dolefully. "Miss Cynthia say not. We-all git in debt head-over-heels when Miss Nona housekeep."

"Well, you do it then!"

"Miss Cynthia say I ain't got no sense a-tall 'bout ordering."

"Well"—Geoff took a turn up and down the dining room, hands in his trousers pockets—"I'll tell you!" he suggested brightly. "Have just the same tomorrow that you did today, and let me see the bills. That'll give me a little idea of what things cost."

"Chicken today 'cause hit's Sunday. We-all don't have chicken on weekdays."

"Oh, the devil!" Geoff glared at Marguerite and she looked back at him, highly diverted.

"Very well!" He drew a chair up to the table, squared his elbows and applied himself to the notebook. "I'll name all the varieties of meat I ever heard of and you can advance objections, if any, to them. Cutlets?"

"Veal or lamb?"

He sighed. There were wheels within wheels in this meal-planning business. No wonder Cynthia's eyes wore a far-away look most of the time.

"Lamb," he said, at a venture.

Marguerite offering no objection to lamb cutlets, he continued: "All right, we're started, at any rate. Now about vegetables."

"An' dessert," he was reminded. "An' lunch. An' stables."

"Stables?"

"Yes, sir, Mistah Geoff. Flour an' soap an' lard an' sich," she added kindly.

By the time his task was done and Marguerite had departed with her note-book, Geoff was thoroughly exhausted. Moreover, he realized that this was not a single heroic task to be performed but one which would occur daily.

"And I used to wonder what made Cynthia so worn out," he mused as he went upstairs in search of Cary.

"Look here," he said without preamble, "I suppose you know what Doctor Bigham has let me in for!"

"It's darned good of you, too!" Cary said warmly. "I don't know what we'd have done if you hadn't volunteered."

"I didn't volunteer—not so you'd notice it," was the grim response. "But since I seem to be let in for it, I'll have to get the low-down on the facts. How much does Cynthia run this house on?"

"You can't prove it by me," Cary said, stretching a languid hand for his package of cigarettes. "Have one? You see, she takes a certain sum each month from the shop's earnings, and with your board and Tenny's, she pays cash for everything. You'll have to watch Miss Nona," he went on affably. "If she gets half a chance she'll charge things. That's what balled us up while Cynthia was at college. We had a housekeeper before Dad died. Then everything went to smash except his insurance and the money he left Cynthia and me."

"He left you something, then?"

"Sure—each of us five thousand dollars. Miss Nona had the insurance—enough to live on the rest of her life, too," he added thoughtfully.

"What happened to it?"

"Well, you see, Miss Nona simply ran riot. She'd never had that much money to spend before. When the ready cash was gone she began charging things and the first thing I knew, collectors were clustered thick as flies on the doorsteps—it was a dickens of a mess!"

Geoff's expression was rather grim.

"Then what?"

"I wrote Cynthia and she took the first train home."

"Gave up her college?"

Cary rolled astonished eyes at him. "What else was there for her to do? I didn't know anything about running the house."

"I see!" Geoff thought he was beginning to see indeed. "And what did Cynthia do when she came back?"

"Started the shop. It seemed to me a lot simpler for her to use her money to pay the bills and quiet things down—"

"Her money? What about yours?"

Cary grinned. "D'you think I could hold on to five thousand for more than two years? Man, it went so fast I hardly got a glimpse of it as it passed from my hand to—others! Cynthia started the Odds and Ends, and she went to Miss Nona's creditors and explained that she'd pay something every month if they'd give her time. You wouldn't believe how nearly she's out of debt," he finished complacently.

Cary's casual air of detachment from his mother's financial problems was staggering to Geoff. Little by little his first picture of the Aylesbury family was changing. In that Cynthia, a tyrannical, penurious little figure, had been etched sharply against a background of kindly, gentle, charming people who loved her in spite of her difference from themselves.

Now he saw her as a care-worn girl, spending her youth in an effort to discharge her foolish mother's debts, keeping sharp watch of the irresponsible Cary, exacting board from visitors who planned to stay a year, endeavoring to put Mr. Montague's check to the best use before Miss Nona spent it for extravagant trifles.

Anger welled up in Geoff's heart; anger against the sweet but futile Miss Nona, against the impracticable Captain, above all against the graceful youth who lay on his bed smoking while his young sister battled—it might be for her very life!—in the hospital as a result of the burdens her young shoulders had borne.

As though Cary read his thoughts, he smiled ruefully.

"Nice family, aren't we? But here's one thing you've got to take into consideration, Geoff. We've had plenty of money all our lives—up to the time Dad died and everything went blooie. It took me four whole years to realize that I couldn't ask Dad or Miss Nona for a check whenever I wanted it—I suppose Cynthia would say I don't entirely realize it yet.

"But I'm learning, Geoff! Give you my word I'm learning. I'm not proud of my record since Dad died. If it hadn't been for Cynthia standing by me, poking me up when I lagged and smoothing me down when I got too discouraged, I'd have done something pretty desperate before now."

This, Geoff told himself, was true. To one of Cary's disposition, disgrace and poverty were obstacles too grim to be borne. He would have sidestepped them—in whatever manner offered itself at the time. Not the least of Cynthia's problem, Geoff thought, was the responsibility of this charming, gay but potentially dangerous brother of hers.

* * * * * * *

Cynthia had been six days at the hospital; never dangerously ill but lying for the most part in a semi-stupor, the result of exhaustion. These had been the six most strenuous days Geoff had ever known. By the exercise of more brain power than he had known he possessed, he had kept the household expenses within the budget.

He had never dreamed that keeping house was so complicated a matter. It had seemed simple enough on Monday when he learned from Elsie what the shop contributed toward expenses at home. He figured it on a monthly basis. A hundred and fifty dollars from the shop, the sum Cynthia insisted on keeping in the bank against an emergency, and the money she was still paying on back debts.

Geoff's Knees Doubled Under Him and He Sat Down on the Bed. "Alimony! A Kid Like You!"

sixty dollars for his own board—he wondered if he might not increase that pitifully inadequate sum but decided it would not be playing fair with Cynthia; seventy-five from Tenny's father; two hundred and eighty-five dollars in all. Surely an adequate sum for the maintenance of six persons.

Geoff had it all down in neat rows: food, so much; telephone, so much; clothing, so much; heat, light and drugs, so much. He regarded with pride his model budget and longed to show it to Cynthia.

But like every other household budget it began to develop leaks. It had not taken into account such minor bills as the cost of the newspaper, dry cleaning for Cary and Miss Nona, a plumber's bill for a corroded pipe, breaking in the kitchen.

Economy became an obsession with him. It would have been simple enough, of course, to meet all deficits out of his own pocket; but somehow Geoff's pride wouldn't allow that. Cynthia made him promise to pay the household expenses out of her own money. Then, too, he told himself that if a girl could handle this problem and run a business besides, surely he, whose mental powers were considered rather exceptional in his own profession, ought to be able to do it also.

He glanced again at his budget and noticed that Cary was paying no board. How come young Mr. Aylesbury wasn't forking over like the rest of them? Geoff determined to find out without loss of time.

Cary was in his bedroom, whistling cheerily as he dressed for an evening engagement.

Geoff dispensed with preliminaries. "Look here, Cary, you're not paying board, I see. Guess I'll have to charge you a little. I'm paying sixty. Could you put in—say forty? I don't know what your salary is—"

"Was, you mean," said Cary.

Geoff's expression was one of actual horror. "Lost your job?" he shouted.

Cary nodded. "Fact is, old chap, I was about to ask you if you'd advance me a hundred. You see I—"

"Nothing doing!" said Geoff bitterly.

"Why,"—the boy's jaw sagged—"I thought you had plenty of money! I thought you were—"

"Think some more—and try to get any of it, if I have!" It seemed to Geoff that he was in charge of a lot of children without the authority which would have held them in check if they were children.

To his surprise Cary's face paled. "I've got to have it," he announced. "Fifty dollars of it, anyway. It's for—you see, it's for—alimony!"

Geoff's knees doubled under him and he sat down on the bed. "Alimony! A kid like you!"

"Been married and divorced for two years," Cary informed him gloomily. "You see, Cynthia was away at college—"

"I'll bet she was," Geoff said grimly. "How any of you kept out of jail while he was away is more than I know! Let's hear the worst!"

How I Broke Into The Movies

Copyright by Hal C. Herman

By REGINALD DENNY

MY BREAKING into the movies was due to a series of circumstances over which I can lay no claim to having arranged. In the language of the sporting world I got the "breaks" at the time they were most needed and I took them.

I came into the industry that has treated me so kindly from a long and varied stage career and it was to the experience I gained as a legitimate actor that I owe whatever success I have made on the silver screen, and this experience has proven even more valuable with the development of the talking picture.

I was born in Richmond, Surrey, England, and made my first appearance on the stage when I was seven years old, at the Old Court theater, London, in a play called "The Royal Family." My father was W. H. Denny, of Gilbert and Sullivan fame, and as my grandmother was also an actress of considerable note, it is evident that I was slated for a professional life from the start.

After leaving the St. Francis Xavier college in Sussex, I turned seriously to stage work. I played London, India, the Orient and New York, in everything from musical comedy to grand opera with the Bandman Opera company. I also spent some time learning to be a prizefighter under the tutelage of Harry Preston, famous English sportsman, but I soon tired of this and welcomed an opportunity to return to the stage.

I had married Rene Haisman, an actress with the Bandman Opera company while we were playing in Calcutta and the close of the World war found us in New York, where we signed a contract to appear in one of Shubert's shows. Hardly had we started rehearsing, when the famous actors' strike was called, and being one of the first members of the equity, I was forced to obey the summons. Mr. Lee Shubert, knowing of my financial difficulties, loaned me money to live on.

At this time the actors' strike seemed about the most terrible thing in the world, but it brought about, in an indirect way, my entry into the movies. Had it not happened, I might never have left the stage, as I had never given motion pictures a second thought; in fact I had always considered them too artificial.

However, one afternoon with a party of friends, I did visit the World Film studios on Long Island. Evelyn Greely was to be featured in two pictures, and more to pass the time than anything else, I signed to play the lead opposite Miss Greely.

As soon as the strike was settled I returned to Shubert's management and at the close of his run he loaned me to Arthur Hopkins to play with John Barrymore, but the day after rehearsal began Barrymore had a nervous breakdown and I was again at leisure.

In the meantime, the motion pictures that I had played in were being shown throughout the country, and as actors were not nearly so plentiful then as they are now, I received several offers to continue my screen career.

At length I signed to play a "heavy" in a picture, and followed by playing numerous leads in feature productions. Then things came better.

I was approached by an independent film producer who had purchased the screen rights to the H. C. Witwer stories "The Leather Pushers" and after considerable financial stress they were completed and I was signed to a contract on the spot.

The rest is more or less known, I was made a star soon after the "Leather Pushers" were released, and since that time have appeared in countless other features. Recently I married an actress, Betsy Lee. Both of us now appearing in Universal pictures. Pictures have constantly been improving and I have striven conscientiously to keep abreast with them.

The things that stand out as the most important in what success I have gained are, my trip to the Orient, the patience and endurance of my father, and the actors' strike in 1919.

SAN SIMEON HOME OF MANY FAMOUS HORSES

San Simeon, where Governor James Rolph, Jr., was a guest while making up his mind on action on the parimutuel racing bill, has little significance to the fans of the present time, but sportsmen of another generation have the fondest recollections of the Hearst ranch as the home of famous race horses.

California has to bow to no state when it comes to atmosphere and as setting for racing, simply by reason of the production on her own farms of thoroughbreds of the highest class. In the life span of Senator George Hearst there was no better nursery of the blood horse anywhere than that conducted by the statesman at San Simeon. The Senator never hesitated, either, to pick up capable runners from other California haras if he thought they could conquer on the big tracks of the country.

Senator Hearst took a fancy to the good looking Gorgo, daughter of the mighty Isonomy and Flirt, and purchased her from Senator Leland Stanford, who brought Flirt over from England when carrying the foal. George Van Gorden, who has horses now racing at Tanforan, was connected with the Hearst establishment and he tells of the stout hearted English filly scoring at a mile as a two year old. At four years of age, in the Hearst colors, she won at distances from five furlongs to nine furlongs.

The best horse in the Hearst string was Tournament, bred at James B. Haggin's Rancho del Paso, near Sacramento, the largest thoroughbred breeding farm in the world. Timer James McDonnell, of Tanforan, said recently that Tournament was the best three year old of his season. McDonnell should know, as he was in charge of the hundreds of broodmares at del Paso.

Senator Hearst was particularly attached to the blood lines of New Zealand, strains familiar to present day fans through the prowess of Phar Lap. The New Zealand horse Cheviot was the premier stallion at San Simeon, and sent out many winners to the important courses in the East.

Tournament was a son of Sir Modred, brother to Cheviot. The stallions went in tale male to the famous Pantaloon, a horse considered by many of the foremost of English critics to have been the handsomest thoroughbred that ever lived.

BENEFIT TO TOWNS IN HIGHWAY PLAN

California towns would receive extensive benefits through relief of taxation, now borne for road and street purposes, under the highway expansion plan which is pending before the Legislature, it is demonstrated by a study of the proposal. The plan is being supported jointly by the California State Automobile Association, Automobile Club of Southern California, League of California Municipalities, County Supervisors Association, State Chamber of Commerce, and Highway Protective committee.

Among the features of the plan is a provision that no less than one-quarter of a cent of the gasoline tax shall be allocated to municipalities for expenditure on through routes which form connections with the state highway system. A new method of allocating state highway funds to counties is also proposed, under which the counties would receive substantially increased sums for road work.

The present law provides that any county having a motor vehicle registration of less than 3,500 shall receive a minimum allocation of $20,000 a year. Thirteen counties, mostly in northern and central California, are affected by this provision. The new proposal is that every county in the state shall first receive a refund of $20,000 and that the balance of the one cent tax shall be apportioned according to relative registration. Under this plan approximately $3,000,000 additional road money would be distributed to the counties.

The new highway plan provides for the addition of approximately 6,600 miles of main county roads and through routes in cities to the state highway system, which would result in relieving the county and city taxpayers of taxation now borne for the upkeep of roads and streets taken over by the state.

The automobile clubs and other sponsors of the plan have also joined in a declaration against proposals to divert gasoline tax revenues from the highway fund to the state general fund.

After fighting a war to end war, Europe is now fighting a war to end war debts.

WHAT IS REFORESTATION?

The word "reforestation" is much before the public nowadays. It is a headline word. President Roosevelt has done much to popularize it within the past few months in his speeches and messages, and it is now dealt with in a Congressional act. There is apparently much popular confusion in the use of the word. Just what is "reforestation?"

To the forester it is a word with a definite and specific meaning. As a technical word, it means the restoring of an area to forest, either by artificial or natural means. That is, either the growing and setting out of young forest trees or seedlings on land which once had forests; or the slow or gradual restocking with forest by nature of land once forested. That is the correct or technical meaning. Likewise, afforestation means the planting of a forest on land which has not previously borne forest. Deforestation means the destruction or removal of forest from land with no conscious effort to restock the land.

Of late, however, the word "reforestation" has come to be popularly used to cover a much wider field. In this loose or popular sense, it has come to mean almost any method, means, or system whereby forest land is improved, developed, or protected, whether the land is cut over or is now bearing mature timber.

For example, a system of fire lines or trails, or protection roads, the felling of snags or dead standing trees for fire protection, the thinning out of too dense tree growth, or even a law to encourage the holding and protection of cut-over lands for future tree crops, have all come to be referred to as "reforestation" masures.

Foresters in California are very frequently asked, "what is being done in reforestation?" or "why doesn't the government do more reforestation?"

The area of once forested lands requiring planting in the California pine region is very large. Estimates ranging from 300,000 to 2,000,000 acres serve to emphasize the magnitude of the planting job. On a large part of these lands all timber growth has been swept away by repeated fires, and no chance for natural reproduction remains. For the rest, lumbering followed by fire and in recent years lumbering alone, have denuded the land quite as thoroughly. Planting with native conifers is the only known possibility of making these areas again productive within several generations.

Planting is tremendously complicated, however, by the fact that this denuded land has been captured by a dense stand of brush, and the long dry summers make it difficult for artificially planted trees to survive. Because of the rapidity with which brush fields form, it is only on lands that are planted within a few years after the forest is destroyed that the task is easy. Brush-field planting is the only outstanding problem in the region; planing on more recently denuded lands is of secondary though increasing importance.

With so great a job of planting in prospect, efforts of the Forest Service have been concentrated on the areas where reforestation is most urgently needed and will be most effective. This has been done only in an experimental way with stock grown in the Forest Service nursery at Susanville. The capacity of this nursery will be doubled to make 1,000,000 seedlings available during the life of the Reforestation Act, but Forest Service officials believe that "reforestation" in California will consist mainly of fire protection measures.

WOMAN TAKES EARTHQUAKE AS A PART OF HER JOB

Simultaneously with the arrival of the first telegraphic news flashes reporting the California earthquake last March, a woman, who would not give her name, called the news department of the New York Times.

"You might be interested," she said, "in knowing that I have just tried to communicate with Los Angeles by telephone. When I had made connection with the Los Angeles operator the girl's voice, calm and unhurried, came over the wire:

"'Sorry; I cannot connect you. We're having an earthquake.'"—New York Times.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

(By the Journalism Class.)

The Public Schools' Week observance held at the Jefferson Union high school on last Tuesday evening was a great success. The auditorium was filled to capacity, and the program was one that would do credit to any occasion.

Before the curtain rose for the first number, the chairman of the evening, Mr. A. L. Stockton, introduced the school trustees who were present, Mr. Truman Bentley, Mrs. Stella Jensen, and Mrs. Lillah Brown, and also, Miss Pansy Abbott, county superintendent of schools, and Mr. R. L. Crane, superintendent of Jefferson grammar school district, and Mr. James Ferguson, principal of the high school.

The high school band, under the direction of Mr. Harry Waters, opened the program with "The Glow Worm."

This was followed by the Crocker Glee Club singing "Kentucky Babe" and "Sweet and Low."

The Woodrow Wilson Glee Club then sang "King's Serenade," and "The Slumber Boat," which was followed by the Jefferson Grammar School Chorus singing "Oh! Marie!" and "Song of the Islands."

The other musical numbers were "Lovely Appear" and "Ciribiribim," by the Jefferson Union High School Chorus, under the direction of Miss Bertha Holtz. "The Lord is My Shepherd" and "America Forever," by the combined grammar school choruses, and "Operatic Mingle," by the Jefferson Union high school band.

All of the grammar school music was rendered under the direction of Miss Muriel Mosconi.

The simple ceremony accompanying the pledge of allegiane to the flag by the audience was impressive. At the command of Mr. R. L. Crane the entire audience rose and stood at attention while the flag was carried to the platform by members of the American Legion.

Miss Pansy Abbott, superintendent of schools of San Mateo county, was the speaker of the evening. She gave an interesting description of the methods of the modern school as compared with those of the school of three or four decades ago. "Modern methods of education," she said, "aim to fit your boys and girls to live a complete life. This involves not only making a living, but also contributing to the social welfare of society by helping make the community and the state in which we reside a better place in which to live."

The Chemistry class at Jefferson went on an "excursion" to the Pacific Coast Steel Company last week. Because of the fact that the class is so large, it was necessary to extend the "excursion" over two days, Wednesday, April 19, and Thursday, April 20, both trips lasting about three hours.

The students were taken through the company's chemistry labratory, their chemist explaining the work which he completes in his daily schedule.

Following that, the students were taken all through the other parts of the plant. They viewed the charging and tapping of the immense steel furnaces and were taken to the room where the chemical and physical properties of the finished product are finally examined and tabulated before the steel is sold to prospective buyers. A guide was furnished by the company to explain everything to the students, and every possible courtesy was shown them.

The Indians, after two setbacks in early season games have cinched third place and may go into a tie for second place with San Jose. The Indians suffered defeats at the hands of Sequoia and San Jose. Sequoia seems to be firmly entrenched in first place and should cop the title without any trouble, The Indians play South San Francisco today in the final league tilt of the season and they are expected to defeat the Boilermakers and in some measure atone for the defeats suffered in basketball and football.

The seniors held their last dance before the Senior Ball on Friday evening, April 21, at 8:30. A large crowd attended the dance and everyone had a good time.

James Martin, Pearl Smith, Gladys Oakley, and Fred Wilkinson are the four students who will attend the conference to be held Saturday at Sequoia Union High School in Redwood City. This conference will include twelve high schools in the peninsula region and "discipline" will be the topic of the day. The P. T. A. held a whist party in the Senior Room of Jefferson High School last Tuesday evening. There were approximately twelve playing tables.

During the eighth period last Monday, the journalism students gave Mr. Saiz, the teacher, a surprise birthday party. The party was held in the cooking room, where refreshments consisting of ice cream, candy, cake and coffee were served to those present. Everyone reported a delightful time.

Mr and Mrs. McIsaac will sponsor a whist next Tuesday, May 2nd., at 2 P. M., in Eagles Hall, Daly City. Proceeds will be donated to the treasury of Jefferson Union High Parent-Teachers' Association. Score cards 25 cents.

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By "BILL" KLOSE

Hunters in California were more careful last year than they have been for many years. The number of accidents during hunting trips in 1932 were 156 killed and wounded. In 1931 the number was 179, according to figures released by the State Fish and Game Commission.

Last year thirty-two hunters were killed. The year previous sixty were fatally injured. The non-fatal accidents in 1931 were 119, while last year 124 were injured.

Of the deaths last year, seventeen were self-inflicted, and sixty-four persons were treated for self-inflicted wounds. Seventeen hunters were killed by other hunters, and fifty-three were victims of other nimrods. The causes of three deaths and seven injuries were undetermined.

Ten deaths and twenty-six non-fatal accidents occurred while the victims were hunting large game. Eight deer hunters were killed and twenty-five injured. One hunter was killed while hunting wild boar; another while after wild goat, and one was shot while hunting bear.

Hunting small game resulted in twelve deaths and fifty-seven accidents. Duck hunters to the number of six were killed and thirteen more wounded. Two men were killed and eleven injured while hunting doves. One man was killed and six hurt while hunting quail, and one rabbit hunter was slain and eighteen were wounded.

In view of the fact that nearly a quarter of a million hunting licenses were sold last year, the list of accidents is remarkably small. Particularly is this true among deer hunters, when some 100,000 bought deer tags during 1932 and there were only thirty-three accidents among all this vast army.

While indirectly engaged in the ranching business, I noticed that the large ranches had their employes sworn in as deputy sheriffs in order that they may have the power to force the hunters to keep off their immediate property, not thinking of protecting the deer, nor were they thinking of the losses to their livestock—it was the danger to human lives. If a rancher or one of his employes should be riding the range, in and out of brush and the low trees, he may be taken for a potential venison by the hunter.

Former accidents have deprived the nimrod of good hunting possibilities, which may be regained if great care is exercised to protect life and property.

CITIZENS SHOULD PAY THEIR WORKEN INSTEAD OF MOLOCH

In these days when so many people are in urgent need, how tragic it is to pay out good American dollars to Moloch instead of paying them to men eager for work.

Make no mistake about it, the Fire god, Moloch, exacts his toll when property is consumed by flames. Nothing can restore lost life, and while fire insurance does provide the funds for rebuilding, the destroyed property cannot be re-created. It is gone forever, and the nation's store of materials is permanently reduced by that amount.

How may workmen be paid, instead of this fire demon? Much of the $442,000,000 fire loss estimated by the National Board of Fire Underwriters for 1932 could have been prevented, if certain simple improvements, additions or changes had been made.

In many structures one finds vertical openings such as staircases, elevator and dumb-waiter shafts without any protection whatsoever. A fire starting on the lower floors can spread upward with amazing rapidity, perhaps involving all floors. The flames often trap occupants of the upper floors, and claim them as victims of a horrible death. Hollow walls extending from cellars to attics are a similar menace in dwelling houses. All vertical openings should be enclosed with incombustible material and fire stops should be placed in hollow walls at each floor level.

With the cost of labor and materials at the present low level, such improvements may now be made inexpensively. The work would provide a much needed income for unemployed men. Pay workmen instead of the demon of fire—Moloch!

Washington newspapermen got a break with the advent of 3.2 per cent beer. Several cases presened to President Roosevelt by various breweries were turned over to the National Press Club with his compliments. Now would that be classed as an attempt to subsidize the press?

An investigation of the Akron disaster should include an investigation of the heads of those responsible for building such death-traps.

UNEMPLOYED APPRECIATE AID FROM LOCAL PEOPLE

The Unemployed Co-operative Relief Association of Daly City, Unit No. 1, wishes to thank our many friends and neighbors for their co-operation in the donation of clothing, furniture and papers which we have been gathering for the past week. Our ladies who have been canvassing in the Crocker Tract have reported that they have been received at the homes of the residents with a smile and good wishes for the success of our organization. It has been gratifying to know of the co-operation which we are receiving from the residents of Daly City.

We will soon canvas all sections west of San Jose avenue and Mission street from the county line to Colma, and feel sure that we will be as successful in donations of clothing, furniture and papers as we were in the district just canvassed, known as Crocker Tract.

If we have missed any homes, or if anyone has any clothing, furniture, papers, or in fact anything that we could use for our members, or could dispose of, we would be grateful if they would call up our Secretary, Mr. Maisel, at his home, Phone Delaware 1973, so we could send our truck for it.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 5 FRIDAY, APRIL 28, 1933 NUMBER 40

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

She fell into his arms and he was very busy for a few minutes. But the tears flowed on.

"Can nothing stop them?" he asked, breathlessly.

"No," she murmured. "It's hay fever; but keep up the treatment."

"My girl and I are on the outs."

"Only a lover's quarrel?"

"No, this is serious. We got into a political discussion.

Try our Aberdeen Coal. It can't be beat.

Jailer (to the condemned man): "You have one hour of grace."

Prisoner: "O. K. Bring her in."

Employee: "I have been here for 10 years and doing three men's work for one man's pay. Now I want a raise."

Building Material Merchant: "I'm sorry. I can't give you a raise right now, but tell me who the other two men are and I'll fire them."

PAINT and Paint Brushes.

A small restaurant was kept by a man who prided himself on his cooking. He was amazed to hear a young salesman criticize a pie one day.

"Pie, young fellow? Why, I made pies before you were born."

"Well, why sell 'em now?"

Socrates tells us the secret of success is to "know thyself." Which prompts the wise-crack: "If you don't know yourself, ask your neighbor."

"I have no more confidence in women."

"Why not?"

"I put a matrimonial advertisement in the paper and one of the answers was from my fiance."

SCORE CARDS for whist parties. Call at this office.

Even the prospect of "new deal" farm relief should not prevent the planting of a liberal amount of garden truck this spring.

We read that bad weather costs half a billion dollars a year. But the raw material for conversation that it furnishes is probably worth it.
